

Announcing the 2018 ANCR Resilience Benchmark Development Plan

Call for Sponsorship and Subject Matter Experts

In January 2018, the Alliance for National & Community Resilience (www.resilientalliance.org) will begin resilience benchmark development for the following core community functional areas:

- BUILDINGS
- WATER
- ENERGY

Communities are complex, interconnected systems that urgently need a way to comprehend what it means to be resilient. ANCR believes that community systems are rarely, if ever, isolated from one another. When adverse events occur, all gears in the local system must continue to function. ANCR intends to give communities a transparent, usable, and easily understandable metric that helps to showcase their resilience and provides a simple gauge of how their resilience continues to strengthen.

Technical Development Committees:

ANCR seeks subject matter experts to participate on technical committees to develop resilience benchmarks in the above-cited functional areas. Interested volunteer subject matter experts should submit resumes/CVs to ResilientAlliance@gmail.com for consideration as soon as possible.
