To Whom It May Concern:

Those of us involved in the manufacture and distribution of “green” building products are happy to see some common standards being drawn up and put in place. This will help the consumer, who currently has to sort through a tremendous amount of sometimes confusing material to determine what is eco-friendly and sustainable and what is not, and it will help manufacturers and distributors who have taken care to produce and provide genuinely “green” materials.

Thank you for your work on this important set of standards.
